

First-Time Buyers are RENTERS

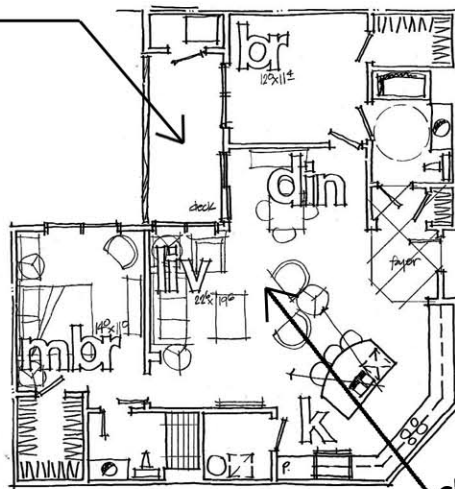

In part 2 of our series, we take a look at the floor plan needs and wants of the millennial renters as “first-time buyers”. From dual master suites to a living and dining combination suitable for entertaining, the lifestyle of the next generation is key. Floor plans need to be open but with separate spaces for roommates. An office and a balcony are appreciated whenever possible. Stay tuned as next month we will look at building features and amenities.

a pocket office or a den can benefit the telecommuter a deck/balcony acts as an extended entertaining area two equally-sized master bedrooms for roommates clear site lines throughout the kitchen/living/dining combination

